

I want to do a will. How do I start?

First, decide who should be your executor. A good executor is someone who is methodical and responsible. Naming an alternate executor is prudent. Do speak to your proposed executor to find out if he or she is willing.

An executor has authority on your death to safeguard your assets and carry out your wishes. Without an executor, there can be chaos and confusion for your loved ones which can lead to unnecessary costs and legal fees.

Then, think of your estate as a pie. If you are in a spousal relationship, would you leave everything to your spouse? If this is a second marriage, do you want to divide things between your spouse and the children from your first marriage?

Do you want to benefit your favourite charity?

Email reception@saskatoonlaw.ca and request a basic questionnaire to get started.